

Palliative Care Services

The information contained in this leaflet will answer some of the questions you and your family may have about palliative care in Bradford, Airedale, Wharfedale and Craven. If you have any further questions please do not hesitate to contact one of the services listed below.

What is Palliative Care?

Palliative care is a term that is used to describe the care given to people who have an illness that is not possible to cure and may get worse over time. Patients may however be on treatment to slow the progression of the illness. The aims of palliative care are to help with pain or other troublesome symptoms and to look for ways of helping and supporting patients and their family and those important to them.

Who provides Palliative Care?

Your GP, hospital doctors, nurses and other healthcare professionals should be able to work with you to help improve symptoms you may have and help you to cope with your illness. If they are finding it difficult to do this, they can invite a member of the specialist palliative care team to contribute to your care.

Specialists in Palliative Care

You may meet a member of the specialist palliative care team at any stage of your illness. The team does not take over your care (except in a hospice) but works closely with the professional looking after you in hospital or at home. Specialist palliative care provides expertise in symptom control as well as support and guidance to yourself and your family in coping with the overall situation.

Who are the Specialist Palliative Care Team?

The team consist of healthcare professionals with experience in this area of care. Team members available to provide care include:

Specialist doctor	Nurse Specialist in Palliative Care
Social Worker	Counsellors
Secretary	Chaplaincy team
Psychologist	Physiotherapist
Complementary therapist	Occupational therapist
Liaison workers for South Asian patients

Specialist Palliative Care Services

Specialist palliative care services across Bradford, Airedale, Wharfedale and Craven districts are provided by several teams who work together. Your GP, district nurse or hospital team can put you in touch with these services. All the specialist teams have strong links with each other and whilst under the care of specialist palliative care services, your treatment will be discussed by the whole team to ensure that you receive the best possible care. With your consent, they will share access to your GP patient electronic records across the services. If you would like a written record of any consultation or visit please let your key palliative care professional know.

Who will have access to my Information?

Palliative care records are held on the same electronic system your GP uses. This means that, with your consent, the palliative care team is able to view the records from other services that care for you – and those services are in turn able to view the palliative care team's records. The information in your record may also be used to help plan the best services in the future. If it is used in this way it will be made anonymous.
